Disability Pride Month www.en.wikipedia.org

What is the month about?

It has been described as a day to "accept and honour each person's uniqueness" and "promote visibility and mainstream awareness" of positive pride felt by people with disabilities, according to AmeriDisability.

For the disabled community, the month encourages self-acceptance and embracing all disabilities.

The month is a chance to focus on and celebrate the disabled community and their pride.

Alongside the celebration, the month is also a chance to kickstart conversations about disability experiences and issues.
